

Basically, my original tactic was to speed South and get under the light winds, and to avoid beaching, this meant very little sleep, just 30 minute catnaps, and lots of coffee..

Despite being very sleep deprived, I didn't seem to make too many mistakes and I think that is the secret of what allowed me to win.

I must say that I felt bad passing rumskib and was concerned that aner might lose his well-deserved third place.

Greetings to all crazy sailors, on the real virtual sea, I love you all!

Trampantojo/June 2014