

I don't really know if I have much to say about this race.. I think many best racers decided to skip this race but because of Norway race ending and my top-3 position in that series I chose get up for the tacks in that race. The handling of the first day's wind change got the top-5 or so boats a small lead, the key was to go bit north for better wind speed and angle for the Dirhami mark. After this unfortunately karriv lost internet because of his travel and atlet chose to sleep instead of tacking down the Estonian coast.

After two of the top boats stopping I found myself being 2nd after tejo. My tacks were mostly chosen by the times I needed to wake up for the Norway race but luckily it was good enough for keeping my second place, there never really seemed to be any chance to challenge tejo

hmm / June 2014