

Race report, Tiree to Cairn of Coli Sprint, Sunday 14 september 2014.

When I just opened my laptop and had a quick look to this race I was considering not to take part, because i didn't see that much options, apart from going north or south around.

But since I didn't have any other programs for the afternoon, apart from seeing winning Valentino Rossi at Misano, I decided to start.

Took a piece of paper, a pencil, and a stopwatch(the winner).

Going north looked like the fastest run home, I started north. I knew that the difference would be made by turning the capes very accurately, the trick with the stopwatch and being fortunate with the server jumps, worked rather well from the start, and at half race i found myself in the leading pack. Normally I take a lot of risks going around capes and that goes often wrong, this time I used a different approach, and did only send commands when i was sure to make it. On the last cape the server left me on the point so it was very easy to turn fast without adjusting my course, after that I hoped for a good result, at least a podium, the server decided I was the lucky guy.

If you make a good result it's always fun, thanks to all SOLers, that took part in the race.

I think that during winter time there should be always a race like this on Sundays.

Ciao,

Lou
