

These races are so much fun. They take only a few hours and when you have to choose different routes, they get really interesting.

This race was no exception.

The plans before start was to go south, lower than the best VMG at first. This due to more easterly winds down there. I changed my mind in the last minute and went north of Cosmoledo. After measuring several times it seemed shorter. A few of us up there tacked south early, which paid off big time. Me and Robert teamed up most of the time except a short tack for me. I was looking for more wind, but tacked right back again.

Fun race!

Well done Robert!

Well done all!
