

Whenever a sprint race starts early, like this one, I did as I always do (especially because today the start was 1 hour earlier than yesterday due to change to wintertime) and I set a start dc and a second DC for the first "rounding", so I actually slept for the first hour of the race. Seems to have been a good plan for me, I like it when I can do this.

After the second rounding I set a course off TWA and speed and I gradually went from 90. 89. 88 and then straight to the uttermost tip of the finish line.

It was nailbiting in the end with 33 boats on the same jump but I was lucky to win by 3 seconds.

And for the record, it was the first time I finished ahead of WINSTON_4 :-)
