

Gray Whale Migration Autumn 2018

It has been a real experience to take part in the Gray Whale Migration 2018 Race , and winning is something I never expected to do.

I am sure that the start made the way for the victory and also the fact that my daughter stepped in as a navigator during the race. I have been yachting from a very young age and still do. When my daughter got involved in sailing she became the navigator and, at the same time, is she really good on a computer.

I found out during the race that even with help from router and wmg., it is possible to have a good look at the weather and make some adjustment of the course.

I also learned that on the next long race I have to take notes and do a Log book - I did not do it this time .

Another thing I found out is that if you want to do well, you need to be there and use a lot of time on the race.

I would like to applaud Arno and Wolff - they are great sailors, so is the rest of the pack.

If there is another time for me on the podium, I will share my notes with the Sailonline sailors.
