

wow.. #2

First, it is always a choice one has to make. Do i race the Whale, or do i have a normal November and avoid this non-sleep-game-track. I compare this ocean torture with the TurkeyTorture, since one will always have a mark crossing that does NOT fit in the time schedule, sleep, work or otherwise.

And, sometimes Rod ( from Canada ) has some nice additional info about the lovely beaches we cross up north, where Smo likes to recreate.

First mark was rather straight on..Scara beached, 4 to go.

Second mark was interesting, and WR walked away...slowly but very efficient. Normally that part is headwind zig zag drama, this time it went smooth. No surprises other than Aner also walked away, and Rafa...well...did the rafa thing.

Third mark, there we lost Beliberda..shame, since Beli did well. The third mark is with Upwind not something easy to do, so, also a mark that needs presence, or attention. WR just kept cruising, but Rafa, Rico Skov started to smell the TACO bar.

So, to the 4th mark, that went smooth, no drama.

Then we entered the last part...and the blue pinball wx tombola part came in.. At this time it was racing the Wx more than those around you. No 'covering' , just try to get as fast through the blue lower WS areas.

And i think it was one specific 22:30 wx, where WR basically got unlucky , so that gave DIKKE ( and skov ) a 10/12 min advance. 1 to go.

Skov was going like a Thai poledancer-on-acid, so no chance to pass him :)

#2 , almost perfect!

Thanks SOL /SOLTEAM for keeping me awake for 2 weeks, and all the fun this game keeps giving!

Best, Dmooooooolooloomoloooo ( aussie for DIKKE )
