

Formentera Sprint 2020

So, a short report on the Formentera Sprint.

Here are my thoughts:

After a period not-so-active racing, this was a race that happened to fit my calendar.

It was obvious that the race would be short and only a few tactical decision and turns would decide the race.

Before the start I made three decisions or observations first go right from start because better pressure and angle on right hand side, secondly time the first tack (in roughly 30mins from start) correctly, thirdly. since it's such a short race, make the biggest course change rounding Negra Grossa to 100%

The first I got right, the second I was a little late and the third I nailed pretty good.

Good enough for a second place, got to be happy with that.
