

MY CHOICE FROM THE START

take the shortest route in distance

Usually on this kind of sprint race, I aim for a top 10 because some soLers are very very strong on this exercise.

For this reason, I am extremely happy to have won this one.

Calmxy for example is perhaps the greatest specialist of the sprint, you only have to see the precision of his changes of edge and the number of sprint that he could win. Brewman had just won the previous one brilliantly.

As usual, I didn't ask myself any question, considering the wind angle, I went straight to the mark without trying to calculate if I could gain 0,05nm. That's not the attitude of someone who wants to do better than a top 10.

I immediately told myself that the key would be the transfer to the Illa de Ons and indeed the rest of my report will show that the key was indeed there.

For me, the sprint is a moment of extreme tension, always on the edge with the fear of making the slightest mistake, even more so when you are in front. In the end I finished tired.

Differences in trajectory between the podium

I think the difference was this gybe, I turned a little bite earlier than others and a little after Rafa

— Calmxy and Brewman

If I compare with Brewman who changed tack almost at the same time, I am a bit lucky to have changed tack at exactly the right moment and it is this moment that makes me win

the crucial moment
