Frostbite Finesse

For the first of 2024's Sprint series, we found ourselves in a 9' Dyer Dhow on the course used by Mamaroneck Frostbite Association (MFA) racers.

While we don't race in the open Sound, the Harbor gives us room for a bunch of 10-20 minute races with 20-30 boats on the line in two fleets. If you are around in the winter, drop me an email, we'll put you in a boat!

This year's race had a steady 7 to 10kts of wind from the West, perfect for our IRL large sails. The course was a big triangle and each leg was a reach or downwind.

A big shout out to Bonknhoot who helped me design a polar and did the required mathematical operations to make it into a SOL-ing craft a year or two ago!

Lights, Camera, Kaboom

This is a video of the dinghy we were sailing, in similar conditions.

Click above

Leg 1

In a short race against timed race and sprint champions, the turns had to be spot on.

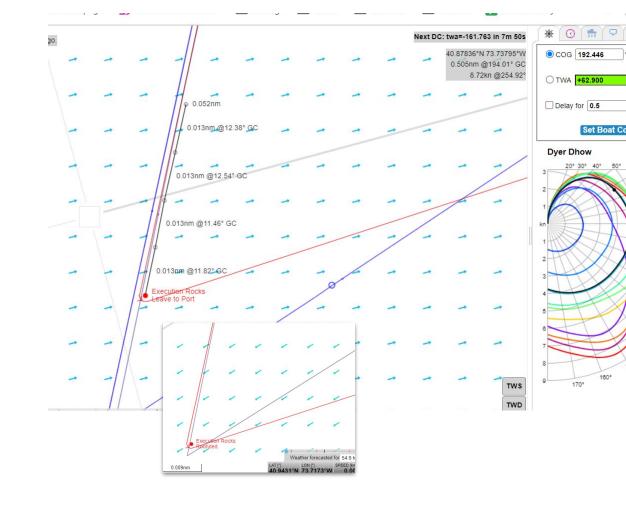

I use a technique where I measure the jumps the SOL boat makes every ~10 seconds. In this race the distance per jump was .013 nm/jump. I do this some 15 mins out from the mark.

As shown at right, I then use the ruler tool to space out, from my turning point, .013nm divisions.

To help ensure timely command response, I alter course by .001 degrees before entering the ruled zone.

What I hope for is that the command boat jumps just past the nearest dot. I had a good turn just .003nm past the mark.

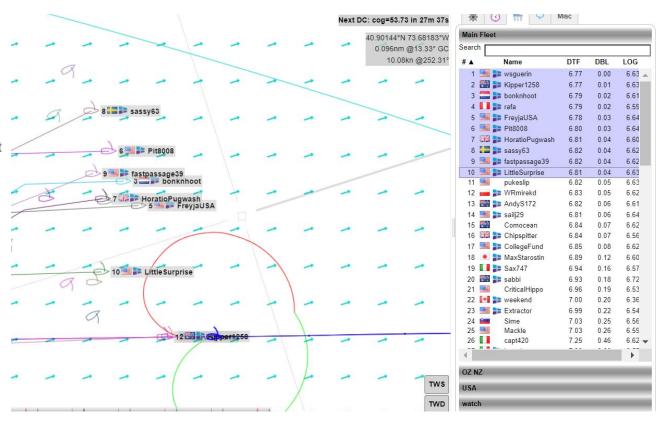

Anyway... WS rounded in ~6th in a tight pack.

Leg 2

I gybed early (and all alone) in the center of a wind lane but that strategy would require a second gybe to go up to the mark...nearly my banana peel.

Others stayed north knowing a tight turn at the gong buoy lay ahead.

Leg 3 (exaggerated for clarity)

WSG is in blue and you can see that hockey stick gybe to lower right, I had an OK turn at least. QT was saying "stay high then arc down", which I lightly followed while Bonk and others in red stayed low.

At the turn I was in 7-8th and my position didn't improve until I angled down to the line. Over the last 2nm of the leg, I reeled in a few boats to land in 3rd, 3 seconds behind Bonknhoot and 4 seconds ahead of Doug/Freyja.

College fund followed QT's bigger arc and said they caught 6 boats so that is something to remember: QT or not QT, to cover, or not to cover.

Fair winds all, SOL on

